with friends, that a continuance of the Russian war for a year or two longer will certainly impose upon Parliament the necessity of legalizing another suspension of cash payments by the Bank of England. We are, therefore, not taken by susprise at the tone of the English press in reference to the money crisis that has come upon the people of England, nor are we alarmed at the effect that the rise in the rate of interect in that country will have upon this. The Bank of England has in the last two months advanced the rate of interest from 3½ to 5½ per cent., and it is probable that a still further advance will become necessary. In this same there is the specie in the vaults of the Bank has been reduced from eighteen to twelve millions of pounds sterling, with a certainty of a still further reduction. The people of England appear to have looked forward to the fall of Sebastopol for a general alleriation of all the libs, physical and commercial, with which they were afflicted; but it is now tolerably certain that no such results will follow the eapture of that stronglood. The war seems likely to be protracted to an indefinite period of time, during which the Allies must incur the expenditures on a war hasis. What will be the amount of these annual expenditures cannot now be determined, but they will probably be very large. If they can be an advanced to the trade of these annual expenditures cannot now be determined, but they will probably be very large. If they can be an advanced to the trade of the expenditures incident to the maintenance of feets and armies on a war hasis. What will be the amount of these annual expenditures cannot now be determined, but they will probably be very large. If they cannot all they give the probably we war in the control of the rade of the carnot and the file of policy of the carnot and the file of the probably have no can remain as a rail, Abolitonists as you are; but effects the control of the carnot and the file of the probably have no the carnot and the file of the probably have n these annual expenditures cannot now be deter ject. The banks of a pension of specie payments. The banks of a nothing." Thus the violent anti-slavery probability is accounted and the South to be decrived into the dether payments on account of these expenditures may be, provided the payments on account of these expenditures are made to the people at home. In that case the money passes into the ordinary chanteles of commerce, and ultimately finds its way back to the source from whence it came. But payments made to the people of a foreign State, enterly outside and independent of commercial has the following from Port Colborn, on the Brantford Power and these had before the pin bowing from Port Colborn, on the Brantford Power and these had before the pin bowing from Port Colborn, on the Brantford Power and these had before the pin bowing from Port Colborn, on the Brantford Power and these had before the pin and these had before the pin and the power. The series of the Democratic party North are to be concealed and the South to be decrived into the trains to pass. The men are all armed. The propose were strong of the provident of the trains to pass. The men are all armed. They had a made the trains to pass. The men are all armed. They had a made of the bridge to-day, to prevent the train from going West, but did not succeed. More trouble is expected.
